Recent Advances in Upper Extremity MSDs and Office Ergonomics

COURSE INFORMATION

Professor Rempel will review recent research findings from his group. These include laboratory studies on computer workstation design addressing the location of multiple monitors, the placement of touch screens, the selection of font sizes, and the selection and placement of mice and keyboards. New findings from field intervention studies for dental hygiene work and construction drilling will also be presented. Finally, early results from the large, prospective NIOSH MSD Consortium Study (N=4500) will be presented. An intention is to keep the session interactive. Attendees will be encouraged to raise questions and discuss problem jobs.

WHO SHOULD ATTEND

The workshop will be of interest to those working in the field of ergonomics, occupational health, health and safety, industrial hygiene, injury prevention and anyone interested in physical ergonomics and effectively setting up workstations and work practices to reduce the risk of musculoskeletal injury.

This will be an interactive session and at an intermediate level.

COURSE FACILITATOR

David Rempel, MD, MPH

- Professor of Medicine, UC San Francisco
- Professor of Engineering, UC Berkeley
- Director, Ergonomics Graduate Training Program, UC Berkeley

David Rempel is Professor of Medicine at the University of California at San Francisco, Professor of Engineering at UC Berkeley, and director of the ergonomics graduate training program at UC Berkeley. He is a Fellow of the American College of Occupational and Environmental Medicine, a Fellow in the American College of Physicians, a Fellow of the Human Factors and Ergonomics Society and a Certified Professional Ergonomist.

His research is on understanding how tendons, muscles, and nerves are injured at work and how workplace tools and tasks should be designed in order to prevent musculoskeletal disorders. In the past 10 years his research team has conducted randomized controlled trials of workplace ergonomic interventions in the office, garment, dental, and construction sectors. The publications of his group and a description of research projects are at <http://ergo.berkeley.edu/>.

Association of Canadian Ergonomists
Association Canadienne d'Ergonomie

Founded in 1968, the Association of Canadian Ergonomists/Association canadienne d'ergonomie (ACE) is a bilingual, non-profit association of individuals and organizations with an interest in ergonomics.
